Academic Leadership Development

The one-week course on "Academic Leadership Development" will aim to equip faculty and academic professionals with essential leadership skills required for future-ready educational environments.

Participants will explore the importance of academic leadership and will work on developing transformational, emotionally intelligent, and self-aware leadership styles.

The course will enhance communication, team-building, and motivation skills, while also introducing the use of AI and data analytics for informed academic decision-making.

Additionally, time management and entrepreneurial thinking will be key focus areas. Overall, the course will prepare educators to become visionary leaders who will drive innovation and excellence in their institutions.